Check before you travel over Christmas and New Year

Local train operators, West Midlands Railway and London Northwestern Railway, are advising passengers to check before they travel over the Christmas and New Year period.

Track upgrade work and different travel patterns means changes to timetables over the festive period. However this year train operators are reminding commuters that some timetable changes will still be in effect after the holidays on January 2.

Timetable alterations will be in place across a number of routes from 24 December to 2 January and the frequency of some train services will be reduced over the Christmas and New Year period. The last trains from towns and cities are often very busy so passengers are advised to travel earlier wherever possible.

Network Rail will be carrying out improvement works across the network at Birmingham New Street, Liverpool Lime Street and on the West Coast Main Line near Rugby.

Andrew Conroy, Customer Services director at London Northwestern Railway, said: “Services are always busier over the Christmas and New Year period and we don’t want any of our passengers to be left behind. The advice is to leave plenty of time to make your journeys and check before you travel in case your route is affected by any planned improvement works. This is especially important for passengers travelling to Liverpool after Christmas and through the West Midlands the day after the New Year Bank Holiday.”

Summary of the planned engineering works

Birmingham New Street resignalling – from 24 December until 02 January, improvement works are taking place to upgrade signals at Birmingham New Street. This will improve reliability and allow for quicker journey times between Birmingham and Wolverhampton in future.

Liverpool Lime Street – On 27 December, improvement works are continuing to upgrade platforms at Liverpool Lime Street

Improvement works near Rugby – On 27 and 28 December, improvement works are taking place on the line between Northampton and Rugby.
