Hot weather advice – Do not start new journeys!

London Northwestern Railway and West Midlands Railway are advising passengers not to start new journeys as high temperatures are affecting the rail network.

The hot weather is causing disruption on key routes to London and across the West Midlands. The two operators are therefore advising passengers not to start any new journeys today. Tickets dated today will be accepted for travel on Friday.

A spokesman for the two operators said “We are sorry to have to issue this advice. We don’t make these decisions very often nor do we take them lightly. Faced with multiple heat related incidents across our network the responsible thing is to focus on people already travelling. We will be doing all we can to get people home this evening.”
