Poetry for passengers at Kenilworth station café

Passengers travelling through Kenilworth station can enjoy some poetry in the station's community cafe over the next three weeks.

Matt Black, who is from nearby Leamington Spa, will be visiting the station at various times to entertain customers. He will be performing until the start of Kenilworth Arts Festival on Thursday 20 September.

He will be reading poems celebrating Kenilworth and Leamington Spa, as well as trains and train travel, among other subjects.

Matt has previously performed poetry in a range of locations including festivals, arts centres, theatres, schools and colleges. He has also performed on Northern Trains and at Cheltenham Railway Station.

Fay Easton, head of stakeholder and community at West Midlands Railway said: "It's great to see a local artist making use of the space in the community café at the station. With Kenilworth Arts Festival just around the corner, this is a great opportunity to give local performers a platform and to support events in the local area."

Matt said: "My big thanks to West Midlands Railway for being such an enthusiastic supporter of this idea and helping it to happen. It's wonderful to be able to offer poems in an interesting and unexpected way to people – and I hope very much that they enjoy them!! I'm really excited about this and have taken the train already and written a story based on the journey between Coventry and Leamington."
