London Northwestern Railway is named 'Train Operator of the Year' at national awards

London Northwestern Railway (LNR) has been awarded the top prize of 'Train Operator of the Year' at the 2026 Rail Business Awards.

The award follows a milestone period for LNR and its sister-brand West Midlands Railway (WMR), as its £1billion investment into new trains and infrastructure came to fruition.

The sister-brands have introduced three new fleets in recent years, increasing capacity on its services by 40% and improving journeys for more than one million passengers every week.

A key part of this programme includes LNR's introduction of the Class 730/2 electric trains to the West Coast Main Line on routes to and from London Euston. These spacious trains feature intelligent air conditioning, improved accessibility features and power points at every seat. Since their introduction, customer satisfaction has risen by 20%, with scores relating to "space to sit or stand" increasing to an impressive 91%.

Significant investment has also been made into the company's train depots, including an £80million investment into Bletchley depot. The enhancements, unveiled by Rail Minister Lord Hendy, provide increased capacity and future-proofed equipment to support the new fleet.

Ian McConnell, managing director at LNR, said: "We are extremely proud to win 'Train Operator of the Year'. This award is testament to the hard work of colleagues across our business, who have successfully introduced three new train fleets and futureproofed our train depots, while continuing to keep passengers moving every day.

"It's been a tremendous team effort, so it's fantastic to be recognised for our achievements over the past year. We are committed to keeping up this high standard and continuing to improve, so we can deliver the best possible service for our customers and communities."

The investment programme has driven significant passenger growth. A recent report from the Office of Rail Road showed a massive 12% year-on-year increase in the number of people using the sister operators' services in the first quarter of 2025/26, equating to more than two million extra journeys.

In total LNR and WMR carried a combined 67.7 million passengers in 2024/25 and this figure is forecast to rise to more than 80 million journeys in 2025/26.

The Rail Business Awards is held in Manchester and run by the Railway Gazette.
