Reduced service on Snow Hill Lines following signalling fault

Passengers in the West Midlands are being advised to check their journeys following a serious signalling fault which is affecting services via Birmingham Snow Hill today (Monday 21 September).

West Midlands Railway has introduced an emergency timetable to provide a reduced, regular service for passengers which will be in place for the rest of the day.

Passengers are advised to check their journeys before travelling using live journey planners. The emergency timetable is available to view here.

Replacement road transport is in operation along the route to supplement the limited train service, which is in operation between Worcester and Stratford via Birmingham city centre.

Jonny Wiseman, customer experience director for West Midlands Railway, said:

"We apologise to our customers whose journeys have been impacted by the signalling issues on our services via Birmingham Snow Hill today.

"Network Rail is working hard to repair the signals as quickly as possible but in the meantime we are only able to run a limited number of trains so additional road transport is in operation.

"I urge passengers to check their journeys before setting out and to consider using alternative routes if possible."

Any passengers whose journeys have been delayed by more than 15 minutes as a result of the disruption can claim compensation via the Delay Repay scheme by clicking here.
